We greet you!

Once more it is our pleasant privilege to wish our readers a happy New Year. May it be the brightest year in your lives.

And now, to the whole world for fear some one might take offence, let us all step out brightly on the right foot and keep shoulder to shoulder during the year. It is just as easy to be happy as to be miserable and a great deal more satisfactory. Some of us will not be in the line when we reach the next milestone. Then let us so carry ourselves that the survivors may syllable only words of love when speaking of those who fell by the wayside. Let us live and let live to the fullest sense of the term.

Cantrill for Governor

J. Campbell Cantrill has entered the race for Governor of Kentucky, and the first thing he does is to set forth his platform in the newspapers of the state that every voter who reads may learn how he stands on the important questions of the day. Read his announcement in this issue of the Times on the fifth page. Two things strikes us very forcibly. He favors few pardons and lower taxes. This platform strikes us all, and Campbell Cantrill may be depended upon to carry out every platform he presents to the voters in his campaign. He has made a good Congressman, ever loyal to the best interest of the people he serves, and particularly mindful of the farmers' interests. If nominated, Mr. Cantrill will make a good Governor. He is strong in the Democratic party and strong with all who want an equitable and business like administration.

The farmer who found it necessary to borrow money to pay his tax this year will find little courage in reading of the big stock and cash dividends of the various concerns as reported in the papers. But industry, economy and holding on to your earnings will make it easier for you next year. Try it this time and see.

Best Protection of the Courts

We often hear of "the sanctity of the courts," of "the reverence due the courts," or "the impropriety of criticizing the judiciary." The best protection for the sanctity of the courts, the chiefest bulwark of reverence for the courts, the most certain safeguard against criticism of the courts, are the courts themselves. The honest, brave, intelligent, dutiful judge is the one and only assurance that the courts shall be respected. The court always will be respected when such a judge as Rodes Shackelford occupies the bench, and will not be respected when the judge uses, or attempts to use, a court of justice for any other purpose than the administration of justice.—Lexington Herald.

The fact that deaths from tuberculosis in Kentucky were reduced from 3,982 in 1919 and 3,705 in 1920 to 3,197 in 1921, as shown by recently announced figures of the Census Bureau at Washington, is due, according to Dr. A. T. McCormack, State Health Officer, to the physical education that Kentuckians gradually are acquiring, to the work that has been and is being done by public health nurses and to the near elimination of tubercular cattle.

"The work of educating the citizens of the State along physical lines gradually is going forward," Dr. McCormack said, "and as it goes forward the toll of the 'Great White Plague' naturally will be reduced. So with the elimination of tubercular cattle. The Federal authorities and the Bureau of Foods, Drugs and Hotels of the State Board of Health are making every effort to free Kentucky of diseased animals, and as success attends their efforts fewer and fewer persons will acquire tuberculosis."

Your Medium

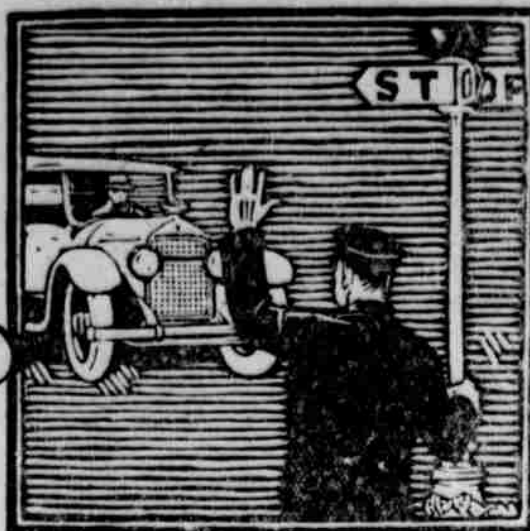

The local paper ought to be something more than a mere channel for little personal gossip. It should carry to the homes of the people some fresh, well-written, thought-inspiring articles. The columns of the Times are open to thoughtful people, who, in a broadminded, liberal way, aim to contribute their knowledge or opinions upon matters of local and general interest. While all matters purely partisan or sectarian will be excluded, different sides of important issues will be admitted, thus furnishing a channel for the expression of intelligent public opinion. The minister, the lawyer, the doctor, school teacher, and every man and woman, in the measure of their ability and opportunity, owe it to their community to aid in the upbuilding of every educational interest, and with such cooperation the home paper can be made a more vital force. If you hear a good lecture or sermon write an abstract of it. If you see or hear anything of general interest send it to your paper. If you go away from home give your home paper the benefit of your observations. In this way we will have a live paper and a live community, and will greatly enrich and develop each mind reading its columns.
